

Hillhead Underground Client: SPT

Stephen McGraw, Project Manager at Hillhead, described the modernisation job as "challenging". And all works were carried out on a nightshift.

"All the works had to be carried out in a busy operational subway station.

SPT has promised to keep the subway operating throughout all refurbishment works

"It would have been impossible to deliver this without working closely with the SPT delivery team, the architects and especially the staff at the station, who ensured passenger disruption was kept to a minimum while the station was being modernised."

IDS installed new lighting and power throughout the station

New fire alarm system

New CCTV systems

New intruder system

All the old systems had to be kept operational whilst the new systems were being installed which, in conjunction with very limited working hours, meant that coordination of all works was very precise. Any task undertaken during the night needed to be completed before the station was then operational again in the morning.
